

Oscillon Chronos Stands Against X

A Fight for Fair Treatment and Free Speech

At Oscillon Chronos, we hold ourselves to the highest standards of fairness, accountability, and respect for all individuals and platforms. Unfortunately, our recent experience with X (formerly Twitter) has left us deeply disappointed, frustrated, and determined to take a stand against practices that undermine basic principles of free speech and customer service.

The Ordeal with X

When we first created our account on X, it was abruptly suspended with no clear explanation. Frustrated but willing to cooperate, we discovered that X required us to add a phone number to reinstate the account. Admittedly, due to unavoidable circumstances, we were unable to add the number for about a week—a delay that we openly acknowledge as negligence on our part.

However, when we were ready to comply and add the required information, X removed the option entirely, forcing us to appeal for access. Since then, we have appealed twice and waited over three weeks with no substantial response. All we've received are automated replies confirming that our appeals were submitted—nothing more.

To date, X has failed to clarify what terms of service we allegedly violated or provide any actionable steps for resolution. This silence, paired with the lack of customer support, amounts to nothing short of a blatant disregard for its users. More disturbingly, this kind of treatment directly stifles voices and opinions, violating the fundamental tenets of free speech.

Oscillon Chronos' Stand

We cannot and will not accept such practices. Effective immediately, Oscillon Chronos and its ventures will cease all engagement with X. As a company dedicated to innovation, progress, and humanity, we cannot condone the silencing of voices or the mistreatment of users without just cause. X's actions stand as a clear reminder of the importance of transparent policies and ethical customer support—principles we will always uphold.

A Nod to Reddit

In stark contrast to X, Reddit has proven to be better. It demonstrates a commitment to free speech and fostering open dialogue. For us, Reddit will always be the better choice for social media. Its respect for users and its transparent approach make it a platform we can wholeheartedly support and recommend.

Announcing Our Discord Channel

To ensure our customers, collaborators, and supporters continue to receive timely updates and meaningful interactions, we are proud to announce the launch of our official Discord channel. This platform will serve as a space for updates, discussions, and customer engagement—free from the limitations and challenges imposed by X.

We invite everyone to join us on Discord as we continue our journey to innovate, create, and make a positive impact.

In Conclusion

This isn't just about Oscillon Chronos. It's about holding platforms accountable for how they treat their users and ensuring that every voice is heard. We hope this stand encourages others to demand transparency, respect, and fairness in every interaction—digital or otherwise.

Join us on Discord, and let's continue this journey together.

“Together, we stand for fairness. Together, we stand for free speech.”

Posted on: 30th November 2024